ADMINISTRATIONS change and issues change. It is narrow for any former official to assume that his way of doing things was the only way and that any successor who departs from it is in the wrong. If Colonel Roosevelt has anything to say, it will, in all likelihood, be an approval of the conduct of the Taft administration.—Tacoma Ledger.

SIXTY-two railroad trains operated by officers of experiment stations of the Department of Agriculture, traveled over 35,000 miles during 1911. Public meetings held by these officers were attended by nearly 1,000,000 persons. Traveling schools to the number 149, were attended by 40,000 farmers and farmers' boys. Farmers' institutes held 15,000 sessions, attended by 2,000,000 people. These interesting facts and many more appear in the annual report of the director of this Department to Secretary WILSON, recently made public. A summary of this report appears in a current newspaper, and, by a peculiar coincidence, in the adjoining column is a summary of the mortality report of the Census Bureau for 1910, issued about the same time. From this it appears, comments The Journal of the American Medical Association, that in the "registration area" tuberculosis killed 86,309 persons in 1910, that 805,412 persons died in the same territory, and that in about one-half of the United States no effort is made to find out how many people die each year, to say nothing of running special trains and holding public meetings or schools to teach the people how to live.

The difficulty with those people who do not know much is that they cannot refrain from telling it.

Fortune no longer knocks at a man's door; it presses the button and expects him to do it.

admirable; but they do not of themselves educate. The complicated apparatus, the works of art, the libraries with which many of these schoolhouses are filled, again are admirable; but in themselves they are mere sticks and stones. The subdivision of labor among teachers, the calling in of specialists, the elaborating of methods of teaching are, sometimes, excellent—but they are the husks of real education. Psychological laboratories, child study, the heaping up of great masses of pedagogical data are also, when backed by real knowledge, excellent; but they are only minor helps to a real education.

Pile buildings, apparatus, methods, psychological subtleties high as Pelion on Ossa and there will result no better education than was given in the ancient district school unless behind this complexity of educational machinery are real teachers knowing how to teach and with time to do true, individual teaching. The more we elaborate education, the more time we spend on pedagogical minutiae, the more we load ourselves down with apparatus, the more plainly it appears that the sole essential for real education is the educated teacher who knows how to teach. Upon his or her personal fitness rests the future of the country; with him, or with her, not in systems and apparatus, lies the solution of the vexed question of the Public School. The regeneration of mankind will be brought about, so far as the common school can effect it, by the direct human influence of the individual teacher upon the individual pupil.—Dr. J. F. Kessler, of Texas.

"Will you allow me to ask you a question?" interrupted a man in the audience.

"Certainly, sir," said the lecturer.

"You have given us a lot of figures about immigration, increase of wealth, the growth of trusts and all that," said the man. "Let's see what you know about figures yourself. How do you find the greatest common divisor?"

Slowly and deliberately the orator took a glass of water. Then he pointed his finger straight at the questioner. Lightning flashed from his eyes, and he replied in a voice that made the gas jets quiver.

"Advertise for it, you ignoramus!"

The audience cheered and yelled and stamped, and the wretched man who had asked the question crawled out of the hall a total wreck.

Future Changes

End of Progress Is Seen in Years to Come

By T. RAYLE RUCE

WE ALL know that the nations of the world are beginning to enter into a change of all things, political, economic and social. The nations must expand and find new territory for their surplus populations because the countries cannot produce enough foodstuffs for their support. The ground which for years has produced a hundredfold is exhausted. The nations seek virgin soil and in doing so will come to blows. Africa will be the theater of future conflicts.

Civilization, which is progress in all things, is like a mighty wave that rolls onward all obstacles. It sweeps before it all that was, mankind, animals and plants, and puts in their stead whatever is needed for its support. We know how progress drove the red man, the beasts of the forest, the trees thereof before its tireless march until they became extinct. The same thing will occur as the plains of Siberia, of South America shall be settled and cultivated. The original inhabitants will disappear. The tents of the Lapps and Patagonians will make room for cities, their feeding and hunting grounds become farms. With them will vanish those wild animals and plants which are now their support.

This must occur in Africa as well. The original inhabitants will be driven farther and farther until with the help of various diseases, which accompany progress, the black race will be no more. The white race will dwell in cities where formerly the Matabele had his hut. Farms will flourish where stood the primeval forest with its animal life.

It may take hundreds of years before this shall be accomplished. Then a mighty hand will call a halt and progress is at its end. Civilization will have killed itself.

As the physician gives stimulants to his dying patient to prolong life, so will silence come to the help of the exhausted ground, until it becomes utterly unproductive. Progress is dead.

Migration of nations, wars, as of old, will be the rule, the stronger surviving. A new race will inhabit a new earth, which will resemble the old one only in its outlines.

Man Living From Hand to Mouth

By FRANK CRANE

the explorer of wilds is due to the fact that men in such enterprises are brothers and companions of alarms.

The more settled and wealthier portions of civilization are full of small, dried up, spidery souls who have retired on a settled income. They are fatal to life of any kind and particularly to young life; hence most of the youth emigrate.

They go west. The west is greater than the east because the east is settled and the west is unsettled. In the east are old religions, old customs, old families, old laws and old institutions—all full of rats and fever. In the west is fresh air.

One reason a king cannot be a great soul is because he cannot lose his job. Another reason is that "the king can do no wrong." Take away a man's right to sin and you assassinate his moral character.

It is even better, morally, to be a gambler than to be endowed. "It is not," says Carl Hilty, "for the needs of luxury that God is to be had, but for daily bread."

Man Who Keeps on Smiling

By JANE L. RUSSELL

There are husbands and husbands. And, like any other plant in the universe, each one thrives as his particular nature responds to his environment. "The well-fed man," speaking in the broader sense of the term, or the comfortable man, is a mere hothouse plant that blooms and looks pleasant amid the warmth and beauty of a conservatory, and when set in the open degenerates into only a suggestion of its former bloom.

Let me hunt for the wind berries that hold their heads above the snow; the blossoms that brave the winds and storms and the sturdy cedars that thrive upon the cruel mountain tops—which same may be transported into unwonted luxury with no loss of hardihood. Just such a nature I would seek in the man I marry.

A man who has struggled through vicissitudes, having lost no whit of his smiling nature, who is strong enough to brave any storm of misfortune, keeping ever the beauty of his nature beyond destruction, who has attained a measure of success and who can live in it with no sacrifice of the virility of his manhood.

With such a man marriage would be contentment, and contentment is happiness.

Horses Turn Heads to Cold Winds

By E. W. WOODS

I have noticed that horses when they are compelled to remain in the open cold turn their heads to the wind, and it seems to me that they stand in this way because they thus present the least heat surface of their body to the cold.

And also in this attitude they secure the greatest possible natural protection from their hairy coats, inasmuch as the wind forces the individual hairs more closely against the body.

If this looks reasonable to teamsters, they should turn their horses' heads to the cold wind every time possible.

BATTLE-HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC

My eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord; He is tramping out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored; He hath loosed the fateful lightning of his terrible swift sword; His truth is marching on.

I have seen him in the watch-tower of a hundred circling camps; They have built him an altar in the evening dews and damps; I can read his righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps; His day is marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel, writ in burnished rows of steel; 'As ye deal with my contemners, so with you my grace shall deal; Let the hero, born of woman, crush the serpent with his heel, Since God is marching on.'

Lincoln was soft hearted

Throughout the War It Cut Him to the Quick to Have to Sign a Death Warrant.

In the American Magazine Ida M. Tarbell has told a really great Lincoln story. It is presented in the form of recollections of Lincoln, told by Billy Brown, a Springfield, Ill., druggist, who knew Lincoln intimately. Following is an extract from a talk Lincoln once gave his old friend Brown. It is presented just as Brown told it:

"Then there's that pardoning business. Every now and then I have to fix it up with Stanton or some officer for pardoning so many boys. I suppose it's pretty hard for them not to have all their rules lived up to. They've worked out a lot of laws to govern this army, and I s'pose it's natural enough for 'em to think the most important thing in the world is havin' 'em obeyed. They've got it fixed so the boys do everything accordin' to regulations. They don't even let 'em die of something that ain't on the list—got to die accordin' to the regulations! But by jingo, Billy, I ain't goin' to have boys shot accordin' to no dumb regulations! I ain't goin' to have a butcher's day every Friday in the army if I can help it. It's so what they say, that I'm alwa's lookin' for an excuse to pardon some body. I do it every time I can find a reason. When they're young or when they're green or when they've been worked on by Copperheads, or when they've got disgusted lyin' still and come to think we ain't doin' our job—when I see that I ain't goin' to have 'em shot."

"And then there's my leg cases. I've got a drawerful. They make Holt maddest—says he ain't any use for 'em. Well, generally speakin', I ain't, but I ain't sure what I'd do if I was standin' in front of a gun, and more'n that, as I told Holt one day, if Almighty God gives a man a cowardly pair of legs how can he help their running away with him?"

Lincoln studied the problem for a while, the writer goes on to say, and came to the conclusion that it was an optical illusion caused by a flaw in the mirror. Mr. Lincoln, however, he says, continued to take it as a warning. He had told the story before, he says, in an article in Harper's Magazine for July, 1895, while Mr. Lincoln was yet alive.

"THE SUN SHINES BRIGHT ON MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME."

The Lincoln in Legend

THE Lincoln legends are many and various. We have them, as with all great names, 'humorous, pathetic, tragic, epic. Supernatural likewise, ascribing an influence in his career to signs and omens.

Noah Brooks, his biographer, says was also 'one of his intimates, says of Lincoln that by nature he was very superstitious, and attributes this to his backwoods upbringing. He gives us two or three instances in line with this assertion which we may take for they are worth. The first refers to Lincoln's second trip to New Orleans, when he and Dennis Hanks, his cousin, took a flatboat down the river to that port for Denton Offutt. "There is a tradition," says Brooks, "that during this visit to Louisiana (in May, 1831, when he was 22), Lincoln met an aged negro, who pretended to be a voodoo queen or fortune teller, and that she said to him: 'You will some day be president and all the negroes will be free.' But this is not authenticated. It is not unlikely that the woman had said the same thing to a great many young men."

The other story is of darker portent and more positive particulars. It is of the year 1860, the time of his first election as president, "Lincoln," says our authority, "took his election with a composure not untinged with sadness. A tremendous responsibility was now to be placed on him. The south had openly and repeatedly threatened to break up the union. He was oppressed with many weighty and anxious thoughts. On the day the news came of his triumph a strange thing happened to him. Years after, when he had been nominated a second time to the presidency, he told this story to the writer:

"It was just after my election in 1860, when the news had been coming in thick and fast all day and there had been a great 'Hurrah boys!' so that I was well tired out and went home to rest, throwing myself down on a lounge in my chamber. Opposite where I lay upon a bureau, with a swinging glass upon it (here he got up and placed the furniture to illustrate the position), and, looking in that glass I saw myself reflected nearly at full length; but my face, I noticed, had two separate and distinct images, the tip of the nose of one being about three inches from the tip of the other. I was a little bothered, perhaps startled, and got up and looked in the glass, but the illusion vanished.

"On lying down again I saw it a second time—plainer, if possible, than before; and then I noticed that one of the faces was a little paler, any five shades, than the other. I got up and the thing melted away, and I went off, and in the excitement of the hour, forgot all about it—nearly, but not quite for the thing would, once in a while, come up and give me a little pang, as though something uncomfortable had happened. Later in the day I told my wife about it, and a few days after I tried the experiment again, when (with a laugh), sure enough the thing came back again; but I never succeeded in bringing the ghost back after that, though I once tried very industriously to show it to my wife, who was worried about it. She thought it a 'sign' that I was to be elected to a second term of office and that the paleness of one of the faces was an omen that I should not see life through the last term."

Lincoln studied the problem for a while, the writer goes on to say, and came to the conclusion that it was an optical illusion caused by a flaw in the mirror. Mr. Lincoln, however, he says, continued to take it as a warning. He had told the story before, he says, in an article in Harper's Magazine for July, 1895, while Mr. Lincoln was yet alive.

Exposes Sugar Steal

In the sugar investigation, President Taft sent to Congress a letter showing how the trust hoisted prices. The retail prices of sugar, varying even in different localities in the same country, generally showed an increase throughout the world between July and November last, attributed to the shrinkage in the Cuban cane crop and prospective shortage in the beet crop of Europe. The increase ranged from 1 to 3 cents a pound, averaging about 2 cent on ordinary white sugar. The great range of price quotations is shown by the 4 cents a pound charged in Italy and Spain and 5 cents in Glasgow, Scotland.

DUPED AGAIN

Maysvillians Rich Picking—Easy Pray For Glib-Tongued Frauds

It has not been so long since a smooth, slippery individual represent- ing—or, rather misrepresenting—the Order of Owls gathered a harvest of coin from unsuspecting victims and departed with his ill-gotten swag, and now comes along a Mr. O'Connor, representing the W. E. Christie Co. of Cincinnati, an enticing picture con- cern, and cleans up a good pile from gullible, but good-natured folks.

It is astonishing how many there are of them, too, in this vicinity.

O'Connor, seemingly, was the per- sonification of truthfulness and inno- cence, and, being a fluent and enter- taining talker, had easy sailing in doing a land office business.

In every instance he demanded from $2 to $3 in advance on each order and received it.

After completing his work here he departed for pastures new, leaving his victims with the bag to hold.

He left a large number of photo- graphs gathered up here at the St. Charles Hotel that relatives and friend- can recover on application at the office of the hotel. Many of the photos are pictures of departed relatives and ne doubt highly prized on that account.

It is needless to say that the work could have been done in a superior manner by either of the three photog- raphers in this city at less cost and on an honest basis.

A stranger can always work the rab- bit foot here; apparently there are so many easy marks.

In Memory of Miss Ella Metcalfe

(Communicated.)

"The moving finger writes,
And having writ, moves on."

Within the past few days the Divine Wis- dom has seen fit to call an end to a useful life. The death of Miss Ella Metcalfe marks the closing of a life time devoted to faithful service, unswerving purpose, and lofty ideal. Her influence was most potent for uplift; her reward lies in the knowledge of a work well done. In the history of a race there stand pre-eminent certain ones who devoted un- selfishly their lives to the advancement of that race. With no regard for self they go forward in the faith as it is given them to comprehend it, and it is to such that mankind owes a heavy debt.

A miserably insufficient recompense for such a life, yet these words being of gratitude may have their place. For over twenty-five years Miss Metcalfe gave to the youth of Maysville the benefit of a broad experience, an unusual intellect and a fine character. In the Public Schools her place will be difficult to fill. She gave to her work a fine sympathy, a depth of understanding, a breadth of knowl- edge. She not only filled acceptably her niche, she was a powerful factor for good in the community. Our young men and women growing up have found the impulse within them to lead useful, purposeful lives, because of her influence. She gave a life time of devotion to her work, and we who know her, know that her work was good. In this world no man can give but of his best. She gave her best and found a joy in the giving.

A fine character, a good woman, a useful resident. We shall bear her always in loving memory.

A FRIEND.
